

RM-10810 is another attempt to obtain more for less, at other's expense. It would be a disservice to those who worked harder on obtaining extra privileges and would only reward those who wanted to take the easier road. General class operators already have large sections of the band. To avoid overcrowding, a tiered system, which is in place, helps reduce congestion. Amateurs wanting more frequencies should not have them handed so freely. This is part of an agenda that if not checked would eventually lead to having no testing required at all. The General license has already been dumbed down with the code element, when does it stop?
